Thinking Out Loud

(By H. M. L.)

The Wine and Liquar dealers official organ states that more than half the liquor consumed in the United States is supplied by bootleggers. The press reports another "rum row" outside of New York harbor. Apparently the people, or most of them, have been deceived again. A few months ago it was asserted that repeal would put bootleggers out of business. This dilemna now confronts protagonists of liquor. Either make the tax on it so low that the government receives no revenue worth the mention, and thereby break another repeal promise, or use the present tax funds to hire such an army of "revenooers" that the bottleggers are actually put out of business, and thereby keep one promise, at least. If something is not done about it, one of these fine days we shall have prohibition back again. For this blue nosed gentleman is not dead, he is not even sleeping.

What has become of the chain letter? It has gone the way of the great auk, the NRA, and the bustle. But it may come back, any day in a new form. Thousands of dimes and dollars changed hands in the chains. If there is anything in the plea for artificial stimulants to put money into circulation, something might have been said for chain letters. But there is not. Only hard work and saving will make this country prosperous and keep it that way. Price and wage fixing are not enough. Values and service are still essential, and need is a governing factor.

Liquidation of the 1929 orgy is still going on. A prominent realty dealer in Napa states that land values are lower in that county than a year ago, because banks are just foreclosing on farms at less than the mortgage face. When these are cleaned up he looks for an improvement in farm prices. In San Joaquin county where liquidation is largely done with, farm values, especially vineyards, are moving up toward normal. In this county, it is noted that there has been an improvement in care given some of the farms. New owners believe that the market for such fruits as Nevada county raises will in a year or two reach the profit level.

The pressure for housing is not greater in Nevada county than elsewhere. A realty dealer in Lodi inserted in a newspaper a list of the properties, farms and urban residences, for rent. Fifty people, many of them in person, answered the ad the next day. The day following there were twenty answers. This pressure for housing means just one thing. The building activity, now begun, will wax greater until this pressure is relieved. The Federal Housing Act is helping. Opportunity for safe investment of capital in real estate and building has not been greater since the turn of the century. It lies next door, wide open, to every man who has money to invest.

Jesse Mayo, our assemblyman from this district, made a notably good record in the session of the legislature just closed. R. L. P. Bigelow, Nationat Forest Supervisor for the Tahoe area, who spent much time in Sacramento during the session in an endeavor to promote measures or the improvement if roads and fire prevention in this area, reports that Mayo entered heartily into his plans, and worked night and day for their success.

Of course, if Mooney were innocent and has spent almost twenty years in prison as a result of perjured testimony procured by either blundering or corrupt county officials of San Francisco, normally he would have a very large bill of damages against the state of California. Innocent or guilty of the wholesale murder of Preparedness Day, he is so much a persona non grata in California, it is doubtful if he could collect. As a matter of fact, if innocent, the injustice done this man is so monstrous that any money indemnity that might be paid pales to insignificance.

Clara Phillips, the savage woman who with a hammer beat another woman to death in a fit of jealousy, after serving twelve years of a life sentence, is out on parole. For six years she must report monthly to a parole officer.

The woman whose head was beaten to a pulp and whose body was mutilated with the hammer claws, is forgotten. The woman who was to have been incarcerated for life is out, made much of in the press, and only 35 years old, is off to a new start in life. This kind of thing discourages those people who earnestly work for the abolition of capital punishment. Model prisoner or not, Clara Phillips should have stayed in prison for life.

GIRLS AT GOLD HOLLOW LIGHT CANDELABRA

Life on the shores at Lake Vera is happy according to the seventy-five campers at Gold Hollow Girl Reserve Camp. Ever since last Monday evening when the camping season was formally opened with the wagon wheel candalabra—a relic of covered wagon days—was lighted to symbolize the beginning of various activities. Of course in this weather swimming is popular and at the special period for beginners several girls have already learned to swim, while others more advanced are improving their skill.

Evening programs have included Camp-Fire sing songs, a game, party, story telling which included tales of these parts, and short evening hikes to explore the neighbohood.

On Friday afternoon the Counselors of Gold Hollow were hostesses to those of Camp Celio, Camp Augusta and Camp Minnaluta. Tea was served on the lodge veranda overlooking the lake and the guests were taken on a tour to see the different centers of activity.

Among special guests this week end at camp are Miss Eloise Ewing, of San Francisco and Miss Marian Weed of Berkeley, both directors of the camp last summer.

Sunday will be celebrated with a special service in fhat is known as the Green Cathedral, the natural out-door chapel which the girls discovered last summer in a glade in the woods.

Miss Millred Knapp, head swimming counselor, will arrive on Monday, having been delayed because the Oakland schools only closed last Friday.

Gold Hollow Camp is conducted by the Y. W. C. A.'s of San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Sacramento and Vallejo.

BUILDERS CONVENTION GREAT SUCCESS

The big convention held in Grass Valley Saturday by the Northern California Builders Exchange was a great success. About 100 delegates were present besides many visitors. The program was most successfully carried out and all felt that much good resulted.

The delegates were greatly interested in hearing from the state legislators who spoke.

Senator Jerrold Seawell spoke about the work done in the state legislature for the benefit of the contracting industry. He was also emphatic in advising the contractors to organize to protect their interests.

Frank McVeigh, administrator of the Federal Housing Act gave statistics of the housing situation. He explained the different sections of the Federal Housing Act and pointed out to the builders how they could use it to their advantage.

Other speakers who gave much of interest concerning the building and allied trades were Allyn Burr, president of the Sacramento Builders Exchange, Mr. Brooks, president of the Chico exchange; Glenn Slater, assistant registrar of the contractors from the License Bureau in Sacramento and Wano Zan.

The convention was called to order by Paul J. Jenks, Loyle Freeman welcomed the visitors and Judge Raglan Tuttle gave an address.

WEEKLY COMMENT

Christian Andersen

Perhaps I am skating on thin ice when as a layman I attempt to discuss subjects of a religious flavor. But I never could see why a layman should be barred from expressing thoughts along this avenue. Therefore with your indulgence I rise to observe that not being deeply religious and continually on the qui vive I have listened to clergymen discuss this and that dogma, and never can see why they try to reconcile the story of creation with scientific evolutionary theory when as a matter of fact the Bible does not state any time when creation took place. That is, it does not state that creation took place 4000 or four billion years ago. Neither can I see any sense in debating to whom creation must be credited, when as a matter of fact NO ONE really knows or can prove anything about the origin of the universe. There are many such apparent controversies as between scientists and Bible expounders which if a proper mental attitude were attained would not be controversies at all .One thing is certain; this earth and all the universe started somewhere some time, if, then, man wants to worship someone or something all powerful why bother about reconciling the Bible with science or vice versa. It looks to me as if the devotion to the principles of Christ or any number of devout ones, should suffice to fill the cup of happiness for any soul.

One prominent corner in this town where nearly everyone must pass is the gathering place of the clans and to get by this corner one must elbow their way through and women must run the gauntlet of ogling eyes. To gather so, to enjoy visits with ones friends, should by all means be encouraged, but there is also courtesy due men and women who must wend their way by the aforesaid corner to the extent of leaving a wee passagewawy for them to get through, without embarassment.

Right under our nose we have evidence of what money can do to help make people happy. Mr. McBoyle has a powerful airplane which it took several weeks to build and so employed a force of men. He pays a pilot—more money in circulation. Gasoline for the flights gives more men employment and so on ad infinitum.

With Grass Valley as the fourth of July hostess this year we Nevada City folks have our opportunity to really cooperate and thus show that we are not in any sense provincial.
